Please note: This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the course and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if s/he takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided.

We regularly review our course content, to make it relevant and current for the benefit of our students. For these reasons, course modules may be updated.

More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content, and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the Module Information Directory (MID), student module guide(s) and the course handbook.

The accuracy of the information contained in this document is reviewed by the University and may be verified by the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education.
PART A Course Specification (Published Document)
MA Diplomacy, Law and Global Change

1. Introduction

The MA in Diplomacy, Law and Global Change is a longstanding course that critically examines diplomatic and legal aspects of the changing international environment, drawing on the insights afforded by the disciplines of International Relations, International Law, Politics and History. The two core modules, 7020HUM Diplomacy in the International System and 7012CLS International Law in the Contemporary World Arena that explore the changing nature of the international system with particular reference to diplomacy in terms of its institutional settings and processes, and the international legal framework in which it operates. These are buttressed by modules that explore both the contemporary threats to the international order and the practical measures employed to address these threats. The modules are predominantly delivered by academics working in the School of Humanities, but two modules including 7020HUM and 7013HUM Law of Diplomatic Relations are delivered by colleagues from the Coventry Law School, a productive collaboration that has anchored this course since its inception.

One of the core issues presented by the international system as it has evolved is the establishment and maintenance of order and the reconciliation of this goal with that of the achievement of justice for the competing claims of groups, both territorial and non-territorial, and individuals operating within this system. Both diplomacy – understood as a major mode of communication and process for the peaceful resolution of conflict – and international law – the creation and maintenance of legal norms and rules within international relations – are central to these issues. But, as indicated above, rapid change at both the domestic and international levels, often encapsulated in the term ‘globalization’ (and more recently the potential rolling back of globalization), is transforming the policy environment and, therefore, the context in which both diplomacy and international law are constrained to operate. We are living through a period of rapid change and that the study of these aspects of it is both fascinating and important.

Modules on the course employ a variety of delivery methods with interactive workshops assuring good practice in teaching and learning, but with other innovative teaching methods including simulations, role playing and debates being employed. Students are also offered the option to undertake a structured subsidised field trip as part of 7019HUM International Security Praxis. This module also involves students reflecting on talks and workshops by visiting scholars and practitioners in the areas of diplomacy and international law.

The course employs the innovative social constructivist methodologies developed by the ASKe Centre for Excellence in Teaching and Learning, notably in the areas of peer marking/feedback and generic feedforward. The course provides students with both an academically demanding experience and one which will be of practical use in their careers. Graduates from the course, despite the fact that they come from a wide range of backgrounds, are linked by a common interest in the nature of the world in which we live and the problems it confronts. Several have gone on to enter the diplomatic service in their home country; others have sought careers in international organisations, non-governmental organisations, or international commerce and business. Others still have benefitted from the inherent transferable skills that underpin the methodology of the MA to find employment in a broad range of careers in the public, private and commercial sectors. Students also address principles of consultancy and the theories and practices found in leadership though an integrated module that leads to an additional CMI-recognised vocational qualification.

12 Outline and Educational Aims of the Course

1. To provide a research-inspired programme where students can acquire up-to-date knowledge and develop a critical understanding of the theory of diplomacy and international law, and critically appraise the ways in which these mechanisms may mitigate conflict and settle disputes between states;
2. To provide students with an understanding of the changing environment within which relations between states and other organisations in the international system occur and the means by which diplomats and international jurists mitigate threats to the international order, to states and to individuals;
3. To develop the students’ powers of analysis and judgement with a focus on the theory of diplomacy and jurisprudence of international law;
4. To provide a creative, innovative and inclusive academic programme that is accessible to students from a variety of educational backgrounds;
5. To provide a stimulating learning environment, with a strong international and inter-cultural outlook, where students can access appropriate resources and different learning contexts enabling them to work both independently and in diverse groups;
6. To provide opportunities for all students to fulfil their potential through careful student support and guidance;
7. To produce graduates who possess key subject, professional and intercultural skills geared towards a variety of career paths in the public, private and voluntary sectors and towards community engagement.

13 Course Learning Outcomes

The course learning outcomes have been mapped against the 6 pillars of the Coventry University’s Education Strategy:
   a) Creativity & enterprise
   b) Intercultural & international engagement
   c) Community contribution and responsibility
   d) Innovation & digital fluency
   e) Employability
   f) Research-inspired teaching

Please note the relevant pillar has been referenced against each course outcome.

On successful completion of the course a student will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a systematic understanding of knowledge, and a critical awareness of current problems and/or new insights related to the theory and practice of diplomacy and international law, much of which is at, or informed by research at, the forefront of their field of study (a, b, d, e);
2. Exhibit a critical understanding of contemporary threats to the international order, states and individuals in the areas of both physical (in)security and human security (a, b, d, e);
3. Command a comprehensive understanding of techniques, standards and ethics applicable to their own research, with an ability to evaluate different theoretical and methodological approaches and frameworks, applicable to research and problem solving in an academic or employment context alike (a, b, c, e);
4. Demonstrate innovation in the application of knowledge, together with a practical understanding of how established techniques of research and enquiry are used to create and interpret knowledge (b, c, f);
5. Manage complex issues both systematically and creatively, make sound judgements in the absence of complete data, and communicate their conclusions clearly via a variety of mediums to specialist and non-specialist audiences (a, b, c, f);
6. Demonstrate self-direction and enterprise in tackling and solving problems, and act both autonomously and in groups in planning and implementing tasks (a, b, c, e);
7. Demonstrate organisational skills: manage time effectively, to set objectives and to evaluate the performance of oneself and others. (b, c, e);
8. Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the principles of consultancy and the theories and practices found in leadership (a, b, c, d, e, f).

Global Professional Development
The programme has an embedded module, Global Professional Development, which has been developed with the Chartered Institute of Management (CMI). Students who successfully complete the module and meet the CMI evidence requirements will gain an L7 Certificate in Strategic Leadership and Management and an L7 Award in Professional Consulting, based on the following units:
1. Strategic Leadership (Unit 7013V1 from the L7 Strategic Management and Leadership qualification)
2. Strategic Leadership Practice (Unit 7014V1 from the L7 Strategic Management and Leadership qualification)
3. Tools and Techniques for Effective Consultancy (Unit 7031 from the L7 Professional Consulting qualification)
This will enable students to apply for Chartered Manager status via the qualified route, once the other entry criteria have been met.

Cascade of Awards:

- MA Diplomacy, Law and Global Change (180 credits)
  - Postgraduate Diploma in Diplomacy, Law and Global Change (120 credits)
    - Postgraduate Certificate in Diplomacy, Law and Global Change (60 credits)

The diploma and certificate are ‘fall-back’ awards only for students unable to complete the Masters course.
Modules within the course, their status (whether mandatory or options), the levels at which they are studied, and their credit value are identified in the table below. The

15 Criteria for Admission and Selection Procedure

The admissions team seek to recruit individuals who have the ability to complete and benefit from the course. Applicants should normally hold a good undergraduate degree, in a social science or humanities related subject, or equivalent international grade/qualification, from a recognised University.

EU and overseas applicants will be considered if they possess equivalent qualifications from other national educational systems and a proficient knowledge of English (normally the Cambridge Certificate of Proficiency in English, IELTS or equivalent at point 6.5 or above). The Recruitment and Admissions Office has a detailed table of these “equivalences” for these qualifications and these will be consulted by the Admissions Tutor to determine the suitability of EU and overseas applicants.

Non-standard applications will be considered. Admission will be considered if the applicant can demonstrate knowledge of the subject, proficiency in English, and the potential to complete the course successfully. This is usually demonstrated by the submission of written work and an interview with the course team.

Prior to applying, students should satisfy themselves that they can meet immigration regulations enabling them to travel on the 7019HUM fieldtrip, should this optional trip be undertaken.

We have significant experience with students with a range of disabilities and special needs, including the participation of students with special needs on study trips. In most cases we can accommodate the specific requirements of disabled students and make reasonable adjustments to the course. Based on advice from the University these courses will comply with SENDA 2001 and Equality Act of 2010.

Students with any disability, illness or other circumstance which may affect their learning experience are actively encouraged to discuss any concerns with academic staff.

16 Academic Regulations and Regulations of Assessment

This Course conforms to the standard University Academic Regulations, Postgraduate Mode R.

17 Indicators of Quality Enhancement

The Course is managed by the Humanities Board of Study of the Faculty of Arts and Humanity.
The Programme Assessment Board (PAB) for the Faculty of Arts and Humanities is responsible for considering the progress of all students and making awards in accordance with both the University and course-specific regulations.

The assurance of the quality of modules is the responsibility of the Boards of Study which contribute modules to the course.

External Examiners have the opportunity to moderate all assessment tasks and a sample of assessed work for each module. They will report annually on the course and/or constituent modules and their views are considered as part of the Course Quality Enhancement Monitoring (CQEM). Details of the CQEM process can be found on the Registry’s web site.

Students are represented on the Student Forum, Board of Study and Faculty/School Board, all of which normally meet two or three times per year.

Student views are also sought through module and course evaluation questionnaires.

Peer and teaching observations are carried out to enhance learning and teaching on the programme.

The majority of the course team are Fellows of the Higher Education Academy.

The academic tutors delivering the course are research active and have published extensively in the field of organised crime, modern slavery and related disciplines (e.g. politics and international relations).

External recognition of quality

- The School has a strong portfolio of academic research, and submitted a ‘Politics and International Studies’ return in the last Research Excellence Framework (REF) in 2014;
- The University has regularly been named Modern University of the Year by the Sunday Times, and by the Times Higher Education.
- The University was awarded a Gold ranking in the 2017 Teaching Excellence Framework (TEF)
- Coventry University has consistently recorded an above average ‘overall positive student experience’ score in the 2016 national Postgraduate Taught Experience Survey (PTES) undertaken by the Higher Education Academy (HEA)

The report of QAA’s Institutional Audit undertaken in February 2015 confirmed that:

- The maintenance of the academic standards of awards offered on behalf of degree-awarding bodies and/or other awarding organisations meets UK expectations.
- The quality of student learning opportunities meets UK expectations.
- The quality of the information about learning opportunities meets UK expectations.
- The enhancement of student learning opportunities meets UK expectations.
